

About the Authors

Joseph Benefiel is a graduating senior from Los Angeles, California majoring in Psychology with minors in Africana Studies and Gender & Sexuality Studies. He is interested in the intersections between psychological well-being outcomes and various social identity markers. After seeing how prevalent dating app usage was among his peers, he wanted to investigate its impact on measurable psychological factors. After graduating, he plans to pursue a career in psychological counseling and evaluation.

Maria Cordero is a graduating senior for the class of 2025, where she is pursuing a dual degree in Philosophy and International Relations. During her time as an undergraduate student, she served as the founding captain of the Ethics Bowl team as well as coach for High School Ethics Bowl, participated in the Hamilton College Summer Program in Philosophy, wrote an Honors Thesis, and was a member of the Liberal Arts Dean's Advisory Board. After graduation, she will pursue a Ph.D. in Philosophy, concentrating on the works of Plato, and French existentialism.

Jacob Kaplan is a member of the graduating class of 2025, where he studied Ecology & Evolutionary Biology. During his undergraduate studies, he served as an EMT for his community back home and conducted both medical and Animal Behavior Research among other endeavors. Following graduation, he plans to take a gap year working as an EMT in New Orleans and subsequently attend Medical School.

Tom Attard-Manché is a former professional ballet dancer, recent graduate of Yale College, and aspiring legal student. Tom focuses his education on U.S. history, political science, and political philosophy. During his undergraduate studies, he completed a study abroad at Pembroke College, Cambridge, where he authored this dissertation.

Cristian Toro Meza is a member of the graduating class of 2025 and will earn a BA with Honors in Latin American Studies. His research examines the role of U.S. federal agencies during the period of the first U.S. occupation of Cuba (1898-1902). After graduation, he plans to attend business school and pursue a career international affairs.

Ariana Virani is part of the graduating class of 2025, where she is pursuing a degree in International Development with linguistic focuses in Spanish and Arabic, as well as a degree in Business Management. During her undergraduate studies, she participated in the Altman Program for International Studies and Business, spending a year abroad in Colombia and Spain, as well as a summer in Oman, intensively studying Arabic under the Critical Language Scholarship. After graduation, Ariana plans to work in a corporate role before pursuing her graduate degree.

Juniper Windham is a rising senior majoring in Asian Studies with minors in History and Chinese Language.